

Slow Feeders

The best way I have found to help horses “browse” is by the use of slow feeders. These slow the horse down from feeding too fast and eating too much. This helps the horse not to colic too. Keeping food in front of the horse all the time (which is very natural) helps the digestive system keep in motion by providing feed at all times. It also aids in boredom. The horse can eat for awhile, walk around, eat again, play with its friends, eat again, take a nap, eat again, go for a ride, eat again. . . .

Use your imagination!!!! Almost anything you have already laying around can be used. I like the heavy field fencing that is 2x4 rectangles. But, this is something you need to experiment with and see what works for your horses.

Net is always open

Made Using a Barrel

Home made. Just drop the hay in and put field fencing on top.

This net fits a ton bale.
